7. Make a précis for the following passage and give a suitable title.

I'll make you this promise: on your deathbed, in the twilight of your life it will not be all the risks you took that you took that you will regret the most. Rather what will fill your heart with the greatest amount of regret and sadness will be all those risks that you did not take, all those opportunities you did not seize and all those fears you did not face. Remember that on the other side of fear lies freedom. And stay focused on the timeless success principle that says: "life is nothing more than a game of numbers-the more risks you take the more rewards you get" or in the words of Sophocles. "Fortune is not on the side of the faint-hearted."

To live your life to the fullest, start taking more risks and doing the things that you fear. Get good at being uncomfortable and stop walking the path of least resistance. Sure, there is a greater chance you will stub your toes when you walk the road less traveled, but that is the only way you can get anywhere. As my wise mother always says, "you cannot get to a third base with one foot on the second." or as Andre Gide observed, "one does not discover new lands without consenting to loose sight of the shore for a very long time." (10)
