3. Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow : 5×2=10

When we dream, our eyes move rapidly in our sleep as if we were watching a moving picture, following it with our eyes. This movement is called REM i.e. Rapid Eye Movement. REM sleep is the sleep that matters. Experiments have proved that if we wake people throughout the night during REM, they will feel exhausted the next day. But they won't feel tired at all if we wake them at times when they are not dreaming. So the lesson is clear : it is dreaming that really refreshes us, not just sleep.

To explain it in a simple manner, I think the best parallel I can draw is with computers. After all, a computer is a very primitive sort of brain. To make a computer work we give it a programme. When it is working we can say it is 'wake'. If we ever want to change the programme, we stop the computer and put in a new programme or change the old programme.

When the computer isn't working, we can say that it is 'asleep'. And perhaps the same is true for human beings. The purpose of dreaming is to give us a new programme or to change the old programme so that we will be ready for the new day.

Dreams, in other words are the waste-matter in our minds which has to be cleared out every night to prepare us for the day ahead. Perhaps that's why babies dream so much : their impressions of the world are so great, they need a lot of dreams to digest them. As we get older, we sleep and dream less and less and that may be because our impressions of the world are not so vivid. To put it another way : our brain-computer programmes don't have to be changed so often.

- (i) What is the function of REM sleep ?
- (ii) What do you understand by saying that the computer is 'asleep' ?
- (iii) Why do babies dream so much ?
- (iv) Why do we dream less as we grow older ?
